* Tutorials: Tutorials are a great way for new users to learn to use Photoshop to create images that are true to their original concept or idea. Use Photoshop's Eyedropper tool to copy the color from a website to your document, and then choose Edit⇒Fill. A new document opens with that color copied as the fill color. If the document already has a fill color, choose Edit⇒Select⇒Modify⇒Contract. Paste the color from the Eyedropper tool over the fill and drag until you have the fill color you want. To copy the color from a website, choose Edit⇒Fill⇒From Web. Click the color swatch and choose Paste to copy it to the current document. * Web site: `www.photoshopusers.com` * YouTube: Watch and learn on YouTube at: `www.youtube.com/timedtext_web?control=timedtext&v=ORiQfy6p9Dg&app=desktop` * _Digital Photo Pro Training_ by Russ Wolfe: A 30-hour series with over 9,000 free training videos. PhotoShop Elements 11 The new version of PhotoShop Elements 11 has the same look and feel as the previous version, but a few new capabilities. You can add text, shapes, and frames in the new version (just like you could with version 10), but you can now add text and shapes to a photograph. Once a shape is added to a photograph, you can position it, make it transparent, or hide it. You can also add frames. And you can now use the Edit Paths feature to trace areas of interest on the photograph. It's more accurate than the previous version's tracing and retracing tools. You can add a transparency mask to a shape or text, or just remove parts of a shape or text, so you can remove unwanted parts of the object from the photo.

Cancer and CMD-R in the red deer and moose. Mammary diseases are the most important problem among Finnish cervid populations. The annual outbreaks of the contagious udder diseases (CMD) and mastitis result in serious animal losses. In this study, we analyzed the prevalence and distribution of various cancers and the CMD-R (concealed meningeal tuberculoma) lesions in red deer and moose in Finland. Altogether we studied the postmortem findings from 1,320 fawns and 20 males and 15 females of red deer and moose. In total, 122 animals were found to have a tumor in their body. Cancers were more prevalent in red deer, of which most (88.5%) were observed in the udder. The proportion of tumors in red deer was similar in the right (80.9%) and left (82.1%) udder. In moose, tumor incidence was lowest, being found only in nine animals (4.4%). Eight tumors were found in females (four in the udder, three in the mammary gland and one in the uterine horn). Tumor types most frequently found in moose were lymphomas (58.3%). The CMD-R was found in five red deer (1.7%), in the right (4.1%) and in the left (1.2%) udder. It was found in one female (in the uterus). Of the moose CMD-R cases, one (5.4%) was located in the mammary gland and four (19%) in the left (one of them) and the right (three of them) udder.Seasonal variations in biochemical parameters and enzyme activities of the digestive tract of Atlantic cod (Gadus morhua). Seasonal variations in enzyme activities and biochemical parameters of the digestive tract of Atlantic cod (Gadus morhua) were studied in the present study. The liver thiol reductase (rSR), thioredoxin reductase (rTR), glutathione reductase (rGR) and glutathione S-transferase (GST) activities were measured during autumn, winter and early spring, while peroxidase (Px) activity and organ and body weight were determined in all seasons. Three experimental replicates were performed for each sampling with a total of 12 cod. Our results show significant seasonal variations in the activity of the major
