No. 6,188,421. It discloses a method of removing a surface layer of a component, particularly metal, for example of a metal component such as a shaft, by molten abrasive material, the surface layer is set on a rotatable workpiece carrier and the molten material, in order to remove the surface layer, is supplied onto the surface layer. At least the workpiece carrier is rotated around an axis. It is rotatingly accelerated and stopped, and the workpiece carrier is moved along a workpiece path, wherein the surface layer is to be removed and a reference position is defined. In this context, the surface layer is removed during the partial cutting of the workpiece by contact with the molten material. It is an object of the invention to develop
